FUND COMMENTARY

Global equity markets experienced a turbulent first half of 2025, shaped by geopolitical tensions and abrupt policy shifts. In the US, sentiment was weighed down by continued trade uncertainty following President Trump's "Liberation Day" tariffs, raising concerns about recessionary spillovers. In contrast, European equities rallied on the back of falling energy prices, expansive fiscal measures and strong cyclical earnings. Emerging markets also performed strongly, supported by a weaker dollar, renewed capital inflows and optimism around Chinese stimulus. Solid returns from developed markets further signalled a shift towards broader global leadership beyond the US.

In this context, your portfolio underperformed the reference index. Regionally, allocation to Europe and strong stock selection within the US were both important positive contributors to performance. That said, meaningful gains in Europe came from rate-sensitive financials and defence - sectors where the portfolio is typically underexposed.

Both TSMC, the world's leading semiconductor foundry, and Microsoft, the global leader in enterprise software and cloud platforms, continued to benefit from ongoing enthusiasm for AI with both companies reporting solid quarterly results. Specifically, TSMC highlighted that despite tariff uncertainty the company has not seen changes to customer behaviour and continues to expect a doubling of its AI accelerator business in 2025.

Intuit, a leading provider of financial and tax software for individuals and small and medium-sized businesses in the US, delivered strong third-quarter results (July year-end), including a guidance upgrade now calling for 15% revenue growth at the midpoint versus 12.5% previously. While earlier in the year there were concerns that generative AI could erode Intuit's competitive moat, recent developments - such as the successful integration of AI across its product suite - have instead reinforced confidence that cloud and AI capabilities are deepening its advantage.

In contrast, LVMH, the global luxury conglomerate, reported weaker-than-expected first quarter revenues, with organic revenue declining amid a slowdown in US and Chinese demand. Macro uncertainty, higher tariffs and more subdued consumer spending weighed on Fashion and Leather Goods as well as Wines and Spirits.

Despite delivering solid results across the board, Alphabet (Google's parent company) was negatively impacted by fears around AI-fuelled competition to its Search business. That said, we believe it is worth noting that during its recent I/O developer conference, the company showcased a solid product launch pipeline and a deepening integration of AI within its Google Search ecosystem, which we believe will allow the company to sustain its durable growth momentum.

Accenture, a global consulting and IT services firm, underperformed despite solid headline results. Bookings came in below expectations and margin pressure emerged from ongoing investments in AI capabilities and slower decision-making among corporate clients.

During the period, we sold our positions in AIA and Inner Mongolia Yili due to concerns around quality and long-term growth prospects. The proceeds were mainly used to reinforce Idexx Laboratories, Copart and Keyence. Shin-Etsu Chemical and Eli Lilly were reduced on lower visibility and valuation grounds respectively.

The aggregate portfolio remains robust and well positioned, with strong balance sheets, profitability and low-teens growth expectations over the long term. While uncertainty remains, we continue to focus on our unchanged quality growth philosophy paired with valuation discipline, which we believe provides above-market growth with better visibility and resilience, especially in unsettled economic times.
