COMMENTARY

Continuing the positive trend from the end of 2024, our stock selection ended January with a strong increase, benefiting particularly from gains in numerous technology-related stocks, especially in software, as well as in the medical technology and industrial sectors, following solid earnings reports.

In the software sector, Nemetschek (software for architecture and construction, +23.8%) delivered the best performance of the fund for the month after publishing excellent preliminary results for 2024, significantly exceeding targets, with organic growth of +14%, implying growth above +24% in Q4 2024. In the same sector, Admicom (construction software, +13.6%) also posted gains, with its management expecting revenue growth of +6% to +11% for 2025, with an acceleration throughout the year as Finland's construction market gradually improves.

In the software segment, Sidetrade (back-office process digitalization software, +13%) reached a new all-time high at the end of the month after strong results, marking the best quarter in its history in terms of recurring revenue growth (+33%), driven by its successful expansion in the United States.

Additionally, Wavestone (consulting, +14.2%) and Alten (outsourced R&D, +12.9%) both rebounded this month, with attractive valuations following their underperformance in 2024, fueled by publications that suggest medium-term operational improvements.

As a sign of the fading impact of large inventories accumulated during the COVID period and a potential return to normalized sales growth, Sartorius Stedim (biotechnology equipment, +18.4%) also saw a strong rebound in order intake, up +23% in Q4 2024. Also noteworthy is the strong performance of Eckert & Ziegler (medical isotopes, +22.6%), following solid earnings reports.

Finally, positive contributions came from niche industrial and consumer companies, such as Vaisala (industrial and meteorological measurement equipment, +10.3%), ID Logistics (logistics services, +6.6%), Brunello Cucinelli (luxury clothing and accessories, +18.2%), and Technogym (sports equipment, +7.6%), all benefiting from strong earnings results.
