(1) The summary risk indicator (SRI) is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that the product will lose money because of movements in the market or because we are not able to pay you. It ranges from 1 (low risk) to 7 (high risk). This indicator is not constant and will change according to the fund's risk profile. The lowest category does not mean risk-free. Historical data, such as that used to calculate the SRI, may not be a reliable indication of the fund's future risk profile. There is no guarantee that the investment objectives in terms of risk will be achieved.

SUSTAINABLE REPORT – METHODOLOGY

ODDO BHF AM considers that measuring the environmental, social and governance impact of an investment is an essential step in disseminating good practices in ESG integration. To do this, it is imperative to have reliable, simple quantitative criteria (no reprocessing) and to allow comparison between portfolios regardless of their composition (large vs midcaps, geographical and sectoral diversity). The choice of indicators is therefore crucial for the relevance of impact measurement. The data for the environmental indicators come from our external non-financial analysis provider, MSCI. We systematically indicate the availability of the data at the level of the portfolio and its benchmark.

Carbon metrics methodology: We updated our methodology of carbon intensity calculation.

Starting January 31st, 2023, when reported carbon values are unavailable or inconsistent, estimated carbon values are used.

The estimations are based on average carbon value (scope 1+2 emissions) of sectoral peers as a function of revenues

MONTHLY MANAGEMENT COMMENT

European equity markets closed July on something of a positive note (STOXX 600 Total Return: +1.3%), despite the fact that the truce agreed in June between Iran and the United States was called into question and tensions flared up once again, with the price of a barrel of Brent crude rising over the month. Long-term interest rates rose accordingly, reaching levels not seen in Europe since 2011. Furthermore, the second-quarter earnings season so far appears to have been solid overall (with 55% of STOXX 600 companies having reported), reflecting the resilience of European economies despite geopolitical uncertainties and concerns about global growth.

Resilience was also evident among real estate companies, whose half-yearly results were respectable, as rental activity remained strong despite the economic climate, including for office property companies. This was particularly true of those invested in prime assets, such as the French companies Gecina and Covivio, or the Spanish real estate company Colonial. However, it was once again shopping centre property companies that surprised observers with their strong rental performance, characterised by rising rents and falling vacancy rates, thanks to retailers' positive turnover figures and unrelenting demand for new lettings.

Consequently, the European property sector outperformed in July, posting a return of +3.2% (STOXX 600 Real Estate), buoyed by generally robust half-year results. This performance was achieved despite the rise in long-term interest rates, which is particularly noteworthy and may indicate that investors have recognised the return to growth in the sector.

The month was also marked by the announcement of a new all-share merger in the logistics sector between WDP (Belgium) and Argan (France). Argan shareholders will receive three WDP shares and an exceptional preclosing distribution of 11 euros a share prior to the completion of the transaction (a 21% premium on the share price prior to the announcement). For WDP, this merger represents a unique opportunity for the company to become a leader in the French logistics sector whilst also diversifying its geographical footprint in a market at the heart of Europe.

In the portfolio, we took profits on the UK real estate company SEGRO, whose performance was boosted by Prologis's higher revised bid, but we also reduced our holding in Klépierre (shopping centres; France) given its strong performance (up more than 10% over the month). We also continued to reduce our position in the outperforming Spanish office property company Colonial whilst increasing our holdings in the French companies Covivio and Gecina.

In the German residential property segment, companies traditionally publish their results in August; we do not expect them to revise their forecasts. We strengthened our positions in TAG Immobilien and Vonovia when their share prices were particularly low.

With regard to the conflict in the Middle East, US President Donald Trump's shifting statements (ranging from conciliatory to belligerent and vice versa) will continue to cause volatility in the markets. However, the sector rotation – triggered by profit-taking in the technology sector – was also driven by half-yearly results that were, in some cases, favourable or showing improvement in sectors that had been largely overlooked by investors, such as listed real estate.
