Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future results and can be misleading. As the fund is denominated in a currency that may differ than an investor's base currency, changes in the rate of exchange may have an adverse effect on prices and incomes. Performance is shown net of fees and expenses for the relevant share class over the reference period. All performance figures reflect the reinvestment of dividends and do not take into account the commissions and costs incurred on the issue and redemption of shares, if any. Individual costs are not taken into account and would have a negative impact on the performance. With an investment amount of EUR 1,000 over an investment period of five years, the investment result in the first year would be reduced by the front-end load of up to EUR 50 (5%) as well as by additional individual custody charges. In subsequent years, the investment result would also be reduced by the individual custody account costs incurred. The reference benchmark of this class is used for performance comparison purposes only (dividend reinvested). The funds is actively managed. No benchmark is directly identical to a fund, thus the performance of a benchmark is not a reliable indicator of future performance of the fund to which it is compared. There can be no assurance that a return will be achieved or that a substantial loss of capital will not be incurred.

Market review

Global equity markets continued to grind up, with the MSCI World Index rising 0.7% in February, supported by resilient earnings momentum, despite a negative thesis building on the impact of artificial intelligence (AI) on software companies. The healthcare sector outperformed the broader market, with the MSCI World Health Care Index up 2.9% in the month. The Bellevue Healthcare Strategy (Lux) Fund (I shares) increased by 3.0% in February 2026, outperforming its benchmark by 15 bp. Regional allocation contributed positively to relative performance in the month.

Performance across healthcare subsectors was mixed in February, with dispersion increasing significantly. Pharmaceuticals (+5.4%), healthcare services (+5.2%), and biotechnology (+3.5%) outperformed, supported by their defensive characteristics and a building narrative that pharmaceuticals, in particular, could be winners from AI efficiency gains. In contrast, healthcare IT (-13.6%), life science tools (-7.0%), and medtech (-0.7%) lagged amid cautious guidance during the results season, and in the case of healthcare technology and parts of life science tools (e.g. CROs), building concerns around AI disrupting business models. Regionally, Asia led (+6.5%), followed by the US (+3.2%), Emerging Markets (+2.9%), while European healthcare lagged (+1.9%).

Within the fund, the three best absolute performers in February were Astellas (+20.0%; solid results and positive M&A activity), McKesson (+18.8%; strong results/guidance), and Chugai Pharmaceuticals (+17.4%; expectation building into orforglipron oral GLP-1 launch). The three weakest absolute performers in the month were Pro Medicus (-28.0%; negatively impacted by the AI narrative), Olympus (-18.0%; negative financial results), and Boston Scientific (-17.8%; slowing growth).

The most important clinical trial readout in the month was the REDEFINE-4 Phase-III trial, in which Novo Nordisk's CagriSema produced meaningful weight loss (23 % at 84 weeks) but failed to meet its primary endpoint of non-inferiority versus Eli Lilly's Zepbound/tirzepatide (25.5 % weight loss), reinforcing Lilly's superiority in the obesity drug market.

Positioning & outlook

The healthcare sector is entering a new and durable phase of growth following several years of structural and policy-related headwinds. Policy and regulatory uncertainty has materially eased, valuations remain close to decade-long lows, and investor confidence is gradually returning as fundamentals stabilize across biopharma. Despite contributing approximately 18% of US GDP, healthcare equities still represent only around 10% of the S&P 500, highlighting a persistent disconnect between economic relevance and market representation. Key industry overhangs – pricing reform, FDA restructuring, and the implementation of the Inflation Reduction Act – have largely cleared or proven manageable.

Within this recovery, biotechnology has emerged as a primary growth engine, transitioning from binary R&D outcomes toward cash-generative, launch-driven business models supported by premium pricing, leaner cost structures, and disciplined capital allocation. At the same time, large pharmaceutical companies face a significant biologic patent cliff between 2029 and 2032 and hold strong balance sheets with over USD 200 bn in aggregate acquisition capacity, underpinning a multi-year M&A cycle. Investor participation continues to broaden, with specialist investors remaining highly engaged and generalist investors selectively returning via large-cap value, structural growth, and commercial-stage biotechnology opportunities. Innovation not only supports growth but also enhances healthcare system efficiency by mitigating long-term care costs.

Against this backdrop, the fund maintains a selective, high-conviction strategy with diversified global exposure to the healthcare sector.
